No. of Questions 6
Answer two out of six questions.

1. According to Calhoun ‘Executioners, soldiers and hitmen do what they have been told to do. All three accept orders to kill’ (2002: 3). Critically evaluate this statement in relation to institutional violence.

2. [T]he basis of decent prisons is the principle that prisoners are complex individuals who deserve to be treated with humanity and respect’ (Stow, 2009: iii). Critically discuss the main failings identified in respect of Bernard Lodge’s incarceration.

3. ‘Thwarting the actions and intentions of suicide terrorists undoubtedly represents one of the most difficult challenges to policing in recent years’ (Squires and Kennison, 2010: 36). Evaluate this view in relation to institutional violence and armed policing.

4. People who talk about the damage bullying causes them describe the effects as long lasting. Campaigns in the media and organisations are trying to raise awareness of the signs that people should look out for. Is this a sensible proactive strategy or an attempt to cover the more complex issues around bullying? Consider your answer in relation to not merely the psychological issues but also the institutional features of where bullying occurs.

5. Domestic violence reflects a type of violence so controversial that even the term used is in dispute. From family violence and violence against women there are issues that reflect different understandings and perspectives into the phenomenon. Consider domestic violence from a symmetrical/asymmetrical perspective and the effects they have in the way we understand DV as a society.

6. Is homicide male on male violence?
